

Step 1: Choose a research question from the list below

Why is education important?
How does hard work lead to success?
Why is it important to set a goal?
Is it possible for failure to make a person stronger?
Why is it important to have people you can count on?

Think about all of the people and events you have read about within this unit. Write a brief response (one sentence) to the research question you chose. This will serve as the controlling idea of your research project.

Controlling Idea:

Step 2: How does this question apply to the world around me?

Lebron James Article 1 Article 2 Article 3	Bessie Coleman Article 1 (p.47 in textbook) Article 2 Article 3	Malala Article 1 Article 2 Article 3
---	--	---

Choose an individual from the list above. This person will serve as support to your central message. Read the articles for the person you choose. Remember, one of these articles was already read during the unit, the other two will provide additional information to help you reinforce your controlling idea.

Step 3: How does this question apply to me?

After reading the texts above, think about how the central message you wrote and these texts relate to you. Complete the graphic organizer below.

Central Message:
Quote from the article:	My personal connection to the quote:	This relates to my controlling idea because...

Step 4: Create

Using the choice menu below, create a multimodal presentation synthesizing all of the information above. Your presentation must provide support that proves your controlling idea. Remember, however you choose to present your information, you must follow the guidelines outlined by the choice menu below.

Directions: Respond to the choice menu below by choosing an activity from each column. Note that the middle column, there is only one choice...you must do this activity! However you choose to display your activities is up to you. You may use digital platforms or complete the assignment or a partial piece of the assignment on paper.

Produce a comic strip, infographic, or cartoon to help your peers remember your controlling idea. Be sure to thoroughly explain your controlling idea and why it is important. Digital tool suggestion: Try Adobe Post!	Write a paragraph explaining how the person you researched (Lebron James, Bessie Coleman, or Malala) supports your controlling idea. Be sure to include all the components of an informational paragraph.	Identify four ways the concept of your controlling idea is used in the real world. Justify your ideas by using pictures and captions to explain your reasonings. Suggestion: Make sure to find your images from copyright free sources. Try Britannica Image Quest!
Create a superhero outfit for the person you researched. Explain your purpose in your design and what the different design elements represent. Be able to identify and explain the person's strengths, how you capitalized on those strengths within the design, and how those strengths support your controlling idea. Digital tool suggestion: Try Apple Clips!		Create a list of five questions you would ask if you were able to interview the person you researched. As you plan your questions keep your controlling idea in mind. Based on the articles you read, how do you believe your chosen person would respond to the questions?
